Cost Factors	MS Office 2003 Pro	OpenOffice 2.0	MS Office 2003 Pro	OpenOffice 2.0	Considerations	Advantage
Licensing					The Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for MS Office (license only, not including Software Assurance) is $499; however, most enterprises will be able to obtain volume pricing that brings the cost closer to $400. OpenOffice has no licensing cost, but is licensed under the GPL General Public License.
Upgrades	$ 400	$ 0	$ 4000	$ 0	There are no license upgrade costs for OpenOffice. For MS Office, enterprises must pay for Microsoft Software Assurance (SA) to buy new versions as they are released. SA on MS Office is priced between $250 and $350 per license, depending on the type of volume licensing agreement.
Training	$ 300	$ 0	$ 3000	$ 0	Since most enterprises are natively Microsoft-based, training costs for OpenOffice will be higher than migrating with MS Office (assuming this is the status quo). However, enterprises that are considering migrating to MS Office 2007 will also face a steep learning curve due to the new user interface being introduced with this version. In general, training for OpenOffice can be found for between $50 and $100 per user for a full day session, compared to $200 or more for MS Office training. In both circumstances, enterprises must also consider the average daily cost of having the employee sit in on a one-day or half-day training session.
File translation	$ 400	$ 300	$ 4000	$ 3000	File translation costs are difficult to quantify because issues can vary dramatically in severity and their
